Monthly REPORT-June 2013

Executive Summary

- Fighting still continues in all hot areas, however, they has been a huge political movement. The Sudan Government is facing series of political challenges with the opposition parties in Khartoum as well as with the Government of South Sudan.
- Dramatic rise in the prices of all basic commodities and fuel, especially in the war affected areas
- As a result of the intensive attacks of Sudanese Revolution Front forces (SRF) operations on last two months and the failure of the public defense campaign, the Sudan Government has amended two laws (the National Compulsory Military Service act and Military Law) .
- Arbitrary arrest campaign continues, Christians are particularly targeted

Security

- Security situation is getting worse and worse, on 14th June a group of armed people from Missiriya tribe bombed the petroleum pipeline, the reason they put is that their area have been neglected and deprived of any sort of development .

- Aerial bombarding of SPLA-N controlled areas in South Kordofan still continues, and some areas around Abu Kershola .
- On 14 June, SPLA-N captured Hajar Animir garrison, which is very close to Kadugli. There was also shelling of Kadugli for four days during CECAVA football competition.
- As a result of Um Rawaba and Abu Kershola attacks, food commodities and fuel passing to South Kordofan State are strictly monitored and owners have to obtain permission from the security authority before boarding any item to those areas. A big check point has been established in Um Rawaba for this purpose. This has led to dramatic increase in prices of these items in the state, especially the fuel, which will definitely impose a great threat to the agricultural season in the area.

Political developments

There have been severe political and security tensions during the month of May resulted into June conflicting statements about the alleged negotiations between the two disputes parties (SPLM- N and Sudan Government). Despite the announcement of the SPLM / N Secretary General of their willingness to go for the negotiation, Khartoum government state that they will not attend. On the other hand the opposition parties in Khartoum have launch a hundred- day plan to eradicate the regime, which has started on 30/6/2013. The situation is further complicated when the president of the state declared that they will stop pumping South Sudan petroleum. This led to soaring of all basic commodities and fuel prices. Following that, the government of South Sudan reported that they were attacked by Sudan Army along the borders .

On 26/6/2013 the Sudanese parliament endorsed new amendment to military law that allows military courts to try civilians. This has been considered by many lawyers, human rights activists and concerned bodies as a severe violation of the constitutional law. Furthermore, authorities also suggested another amendment in the national compulsory military service law, that give the Ministry of Defense the power to call upon and recruit any civilian when ever needed or there is hostility.

Christians are still targeted and continue to suffer discrimination, on 25th June, police authorities attacked the headquarter of the Presbyterian Church.

Humanitarian situation

As mentioned earlier basic commodities and fuel prices are rising all the time in all parts of Sudan, in particular in conflict affected areas. This is due to the deterioration of the value of the Sudanese pound and the control put on the commodities and fuel passing to the conflict zones in Southern Kordofan.

IDPs continue to suffer, as access to national and international aids is still denied. IDPs in El Rahad who used to be supported by the government, started to leave their camps, because the support and aids given from the government is diminishing.

.Arrests:

This month witnessed a decline in the number of detentions, however many are hiding themselves from the authorities fearing of being arrested. More than ten has been arrested and six are released during this reporting period

Another Issue (Blue Nile Trials):

Blue Nile detainees hearing still going on, there was two sittings, on 24th and 25th June and the next sittings will be on 8th and 7th July. Surprisingly, there was an addition of six people, four of them were not even among the previously announced list, which meant that authorities could add more and more under no legal grounds. In addition, the approach of all trials has been ethnic in nature, as many have never been questioned of any issues rather than their ethnicity and their tribes being involved in the conflict. However they are members in National Congress Party – NCP (party in power).

Sporadic events:

- Up to date the eighteen detainees women from Kadugli are still in El Obeid prison for more than nine month without any legal basis.
- The amendment of Article (4) in the military forces law is considered as a severe violation of the Constitution law and an attempt to legalize a series of violations. The amendment include the following:
 1. Working in either civilian or military service in any country in a state of hostility with Sudan is prohibited and violators should be tried.
 2. Any civilian who help intentionally or negligibly in the escape of prisoners of war; leak military secrets; has imaging devices with a purpose to snap military area or layout that area; also any civilian who tries to persuade a military personnel to join the insurgency forces will be tried.

3. National Court is not allowed to review or decline judgments of the military court only in the cases of death sentence or imprisonment for more than ten years.

- The suggested amendment for the National Compulsory Military Service act, it will be a tool on hands of defense minister to force for military recruitment any one between (17 – 60 years old).
- On 24th June many people gathered at the Catholic Church School in El Thaoura - Omdurman protesting against the closure and seizing of the School for more than two years. It is important to that this school is a registered property of the Catholic Church and delivering it is services to all citizens without religious or ethnic discrimination. However the government is claiming that the school was for the South Sudanese and after the separation should be for the government of Sudan, nevertheless the ministry of education promised to hand the school to the church on 23rd of May 2013, but he didn't.

Appeal:

Based on the previous mentioned recent amendments in laws, it has become evident that civilians who are now under arbitrary detention, would either be tried on the military courts or kept for longer periods. Moreover, those amendments made on the law, could make possession of smart phones rise to the level of a crime, as they contain imaging devices. Therefore, we appeal to all human rights organization to exert their maximum to prevent these law from being implemented.
